BNP votes to stem the tide of offshored jobs

THE BNP will make firms that offshore jobs liable for the costs which they impose on the economy by way of unemployment benefit, retraining, loss of local spending power, etc.

THE BNP will penalise, in proportion to the number of jobs that have been offshored, companies which collect, or have collected, development aid for the creation of jobs here in Britain.

THE BNP will oppose the European Union Services Directive, which promotes the stealth privatisation, and thus the likelihood of offshoring, of the entire white-collar public sector.

THE BNP will end the practice of artificially inflating the value of Sterling. This makes British workers more expensive and encourages business to look to foreign markets where the workforce is cheaper.

THE BNP will prohibit the offshoring of any work done for the Government, or by any company that has Government contracts.

THE BNP will bring to an end the practice of providing hidden tax subsidies for companies that are involved in the offshoring of British jobs.

THE BNP believes that the offshoring of British jobs while providing a short term profit for corporations, leaves long-term losses for our country. The British National Party will end all policies, from tax to research and development, which encourage such short-termism.

THE BNP will extend professional licensing requirements to cover all public and private work performed offshore. If an occupation or task requires a professional licence when done in the UK, then an equivalent licence shall be required for the work to be done abroad.

Burnley BNP acknowledge their brave lady councillors

● Sharon Wilkinson

● Carol Hughes

PADIHAM Town Hall in Burnley was the venue for a night that will long be remembered as it marked a milestone in the British National Party journey into mainstream politics.

It was the first time the BNP had been able to book such a prestigious public building in its own name and use it as our own for the night. Burnley BNP is now genuinely part of the mainstream political scene in the town and the fact that the Party could use the town hall to host its Free Speech Christmas Cabaret Show is a testament to that fact.

Over 200 people attended the gala evening where the special guests were the Free Speech Two - BNP Chairman Nick Griffin and Head of BNP Publicity Dept Mark Collett, who both received a special medal engraved with the words 'Defenders of Free Speech'.

Recognition was also given to Burnley BNP's three brave lady councillors, group leader Sharon Wilkinson, long-serving councillor Carol Hughes and hard-working councillor Patricia Thompson. A tribute was also paid to the BNP's other two original Burnley councillors from 2002, Terence Grogan and Dave Edwards. Terry was in attendance and received loud applause from all those present.

Entertainment was provided by a specially assembled group of BNP musicians and Nick Griffin even took to the microphone to get involved in the sing along. Well done to Burnley organiser Dave Shapcott for an excellent event, and to the security team on hand who ensured everyone had a carefree and relaxed evening. The one quiet moment came when a minute's silence was held in memory of BNP activist Sheila Goodwin.

Anti-BNP meeting hears of a Labour Party in meltdown

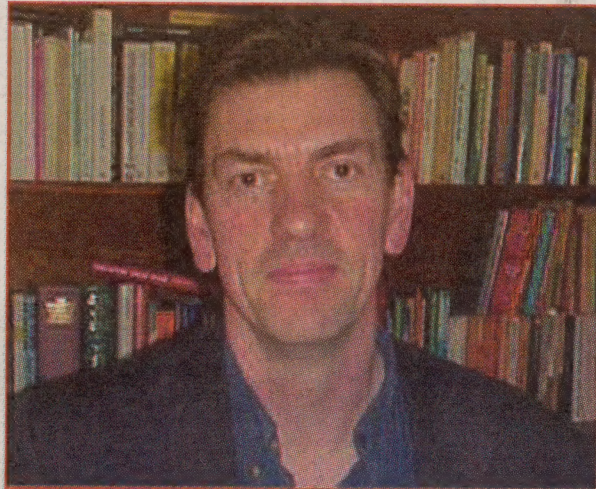

SEVENTY-FIVE Labour Party constituency organisations attended a specially convened conference in Birmingham, sponsored by the Amicus trade union, to 'Fight the BNP'.

But it was a depressing day for the remaining few Labour activists as they digested briefing packs and sat through a series of workshops. Time and time again speakers stressed the need to utilise the trade union funding available to campaign against the BNP, but representatives from the CLP argued that it wasn't just down to money:

"We are having to deal with difficult issues such as migrant workers, the offshoring of jobs and open support for the BNP on the doorstep," said one. "It's no good having thousands of glossy leaflets attacking the BNP if you have no one to put them out," said another. And that was the message that came across. Safe Labour parliamentary seats with a local Party of less than 50 members, and constituencies where they hadn't door-knocked for years because they simply didn't have any activists left to do so.

BNP CANVASSERS: Making real inroads into Labour's vote.

POLITICAL PUNDITS: Michael Thrasher of the University of Plymouth and Freedom editor Martin Wingfield.

Caution warning as top political analyst predicts record BNP votes in May

ONE OF Britain's top voting experts has predicted that the British National Party could be on course to win a record number of council seats at the local elections in May.

Professor Michael Thrasher of the University of Plymouth is the country's leading election analyst and in a recent interview with Sky News political commentator, Adam Boulton, he said:

"In May 2007, given the current state of public opinion, the BNP are likely to receive further endorsement from a growing section of voters, perhaps even a record level of votes and council seats."

Such comments from someone with their finger constantly on the nation's voting pulse will give real encouragement to BNP activists throughout the country as they work towards polling day on May 3rd.

But a word of warning has come from Freedom editor Martin Wingfield in an address to BNP voting members at the Party's Blackpool conference.

"Let's hope that the country's top political analyst is right and that we do gain record levels of votes and seats. Let's work hard over the next six months to make Michael Thrasher's prediction a reality," he told the audience.

"But May 3rd isn't any sort of finishing line, it's not the final examination when the BNP is marked on our ladder to power.

"Whether we achieve record levels of votes and seats or not, after May 3rd there's always going to be the next local council by-election or maybe a parliamentary by-election, then May 2008's local elections, then the European Elections, then the General Elections.

"The British National Party is in this for the long haul. There are going to be nights of jubilation - which the Barking and Dagenham results gave us last May - and there will be nights of disappointment. Not only do you need to be prepared for this, but you need to prepare your members for this. When you go back to your branches and groups, prepare your election campaigners for the contest ahead, instill them with enthusiasm, but also temper any unrealistic optimism."

Martin Wingfield said that for the British National Party to succeed it needed the morale of its members to be as good on the election nights it fails to meet its potential as on those when the BNP takes all before it.

"In politics there's always going to be another day, and we must ensure that our membership is always in the best shape to meet the challenges it presents," he said.

Labour admits its supporters are turning to the BNP

THE chairman of the Labour Party, Hazel Blears, has admitted that an internal analysis of campaigns by the Labour Party in Keighley, West Yorkshire, reveals that Labour voters are defecting to the British National Party because they feel their 'genuine grievances' are being ignored.

The document, written by Mark Taylor, a Labour Party agent, also warns that it is the Party's failure to address public concern about immigration that is playing into the hands of the BNP. It says that the Government's argument that immigration benefits the economy holds little sway with voters, and just shows Labour as "unconcerned and out of touch" with ordinary people's needs.

HAZEL BLEARS: "Labour voters are defecting to the BNP."

LOCAL ELECTIONS: "It's vital the BNP makes an impact before it's too late" - Nick Griffin

AT THE local elections last May the British National Party gained 34 new councillors. The United Kingdom Independence Party didn't gain any - in fact UKIP only managed to top the poll in one council seat.

In the seven local council elections where BNP and UKIP candidates have gone head-to-head since May, the BNP has beaten UKIP in six of them, polling twice as many votes.

With David Cameron's Conservative Party targeting its policies towards the Centre-Left of British politics in order to attract Lib-Dem voters, the silent majority of British voters have been left unrepresented by the three main parties.

The British National Party's chairman Nick Griffin, knows the local elections on May 3rd are vital for both the BNP and those Britons who still hold dear our traditional family and Christian values.

"We need to get a large number of British National Party councillors elected", he told Freedom.

"As many councils as possible need to have a BNP councillor to alert the public when anti-British policies are being pushed through by councillors from the three main parties.

"In the run-up to these elections we need all the help we can get and that is why I'm asking UKIP members and supporters to come and join us and help us in our great electoral push on behalf of the British people.

"The BNP is the Party of the moment. We have the momentum and that is why Labour and the Tories are running scared of us. We have proved that we can win seats anywhere, from the North to the South.

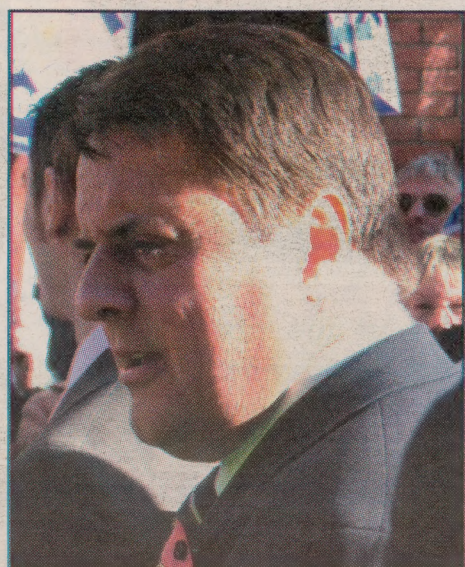

"If experienced and committed campaigners channel their efforts on UKIP campaigns and candidates that can't possibly win, it is a wasted effort and one that harms the interests of the British people.

"To these people I say, come and join us. Come and stand as BNP candidates or join our campaign teams to ensure that the British people have a voice on councils across the country."

And Nick Griffin makes no apologies for this courting of UKIP members and supporters.

"I have met them at elections - out canvassing and at the counts. They are good people, very good people and we would welcome their contributions to our campaigns. The situation our country faces is much too serious to let minor differences deflect from out efforts in May."

Cuts in services for the elderly as councils struggle to meet targets

Bdenied the essential home help that enables them to keep living independent lives.

And it's all because council tax money used to help fund services for the elderly is needed elsewhere.

Now councils are being forced to demand £300 a week from elderly people for services like meals on wheels, cleaning and personal care delivered in their own homes. That is three quarters of a typical bill charged by a residential care home.

MEALS ON WHEELS: One of the home help services that have been axed so councils can keep within Government targets.

The charity Counsel and Care said: "It has become very difficult for older people to access help in the community."

A number of local authorities, particularly in southern England, have admitted to cutting social services budgets for older people. They say this has been necessary in order to keep the rise in council tax - due to pressure on services from asylum seekers, refugees and migrants workers and their families - in line with Government targets.

Asylum seeker gets £300 a week for food

Coventry Council has been forced to set aside an additional £400,000 of taxpayers' cash to support 18 asylum-seeking families living in Coventry.

The council, which is paying the rent for 20 adults and 25 children and giving them money to live on, had to find additional funds after a failed asylum seeker from Nigeria complained about the £60 a week handout for food Coventry City Council gave him to feed his family. Adeolo Banwo is now getting nearly £300 a week to feed his wife and five children in addition to £400 a month rent being paid on his home in the Stoke district of Coventry.

1000s of Christmas cards for a political prisoner

Over the Christmas period, political prisoner Kevin Hughes, received thousands of Christmas cards from well-wishers.

Hopefully such a show of solidarity from the public will help Kevin deal with his final five months of incarceration for a non-existent crime.

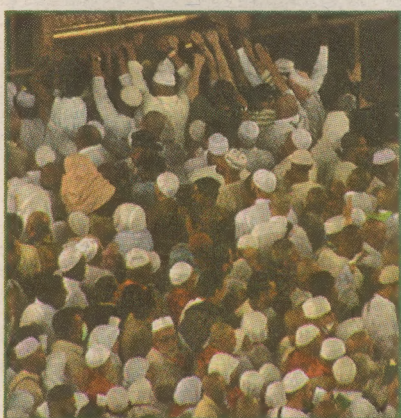

Paedophiles and muggers get set free early but Kevin Hughes has had his application for early release with tagging refused because he is "not a low risk prisoner." The Worcestershire businessman's "crime" was an exchange of words with a twice failed Iraqi asylum seeker who claimed in court he could not understand English. Kevin, who had no criminal record, was sentenced to 30 months in prison, reduced on appeal to 24 months.

Please remember Kevin Hughes over the next few months and write to him at Featherstone Prison, Kevin Hughes, XB4290, HMP Featherstone, New Road, Wolverhampton WV10 7PU.

KEVIN HUGHES: Not forgotten.

Hajj health care provided by the British taxpayer

Government money has once again been used to provide a 'help and support' service for the 25,000 Muslims from Britain that travelled to Saudi Arabia for this year's Hajj pilgrimage.

Foreign Secretary Margaret Beckett, when launching the British Hajj Delegation at the Islamic Cultural Centre in Regents Park said:

"This will be the eighth British Hajj delegation. Britain is the only non-Muslim country to give this level of support to its citizens during the Hajj." In 2006 during the 15-day period, the British Hajj delegation provided medical services which treated over 7,000 patients! What on earth was the cost to the British taxpayer of such an extensive travelling health service?

What on earth is our Government doing in siphoning off scarce NHS funds to provide a care service for 25,000 Muslims from Britain who choose to take a visit to Mecca.

Doesn't this once again show where this Government's priorities lie. Services for our old folk who have served this country loyally for a life time are cut to make savings, yet there's money available to provide health care for Muslims taking a holiday in the Middle East.

Integration is impossible

Assisted resettlement to a Muslim country is the answer?

MOST POWERFUL RELIGION: Islam is much too strong a religion to be accommodated in an easy-going Christian country such as ours.

A Government shouldn't encourage immigrants to come and settle in a 'multi-cultural' country and then, once they are here, tell them that the policy has changed. It can't suddenly say these immigrants must now ditch their culture and religion and integrate into the host nation's society.

But that is exactly what Tony Blair and New Labour have done. They opened Britain's borders and welcomed in a wealth of different cultures, asking them to come and 'enrich' our multi-cultural society, but now this society has fallen apart, it is now telling these immigrants that they must integrate. Some cultures and religions will be able to integrate, but not Muslims and not Islam.

Islam is the most powerful religion on earth. Its followers are completely committed. There can be no 'watered-down' Islam and no compromise on the Koran. Islamic law must be adhered to by all Muslims, and those that don't cease to be regarded as followers of the faith.

The Government's belated call for integration will just lead to further polarisation of the Muslim community and increased divisions in society.

Islam is much too strong a religion to be accommodated in an easy-going Christian country such as ours. If we let Islam grow unchecked it will take us over, and if we try to stem it or force its followers to 'integrate', the result will be the same, only with more bloodshed along the way.

The only answer is to encourage, with significant financial incentives, Muslims in Britain to resettle in a country where Islam is the majority religion and Sharia law dictates the lifestyle. By grabbing this nettle now, we will save our nation and its people from being 'stung' in years to come.

Primary propaganda

PROPAGANDA promoting Islam is being pumped into Britain's primary schools in religious education lessons through packs provided by the Muslim Council of Britain.

The packs contain a head scarf, a prayer mat, a prayer cap, sacred clothing worn on pilgrimages, a poster of Muslim prophets and a compass to locate the direction of Mecca.

The MCB claim it's just a 'teaching resource' to provide children aged from seven to eleven with information about Islamic beliefs. The pack also contains CD's, videos, books and pamphlets as well as a model kit of a mosque.

Iqbal Sacranie of the MCB said: "We want to ensure that every child has access to Islamic resources in their schools. We now have over 800 schools using the packs."

Some parents however haven't been impressed by what they see as 'brainwashing' and have taken their children out of the RE lessons where Islam is being promoted.

CRE want job applicants judged on skin colour

RACE relations boss Trevor Phillips, is to meet local government employers and specialist lawyers to see if new employment procedures can be put into place to increase the proportion of ethnic minorities in public workforces.

"When there is a clear public need, we must allow our institutions to take special measures with the aim of integrating their workforces faster than would otherwise be the case," he said.

Some areas of employment "will never stop being all-white without new kinds of positive action".

PHILLIPS: Signing away the rights of the indigenous population to be offered a job on their suitability and experience.

In plain English that means Phillips wants positive discrimination and ethnic quotas put in place to put Black and Asian applicants for local government before a traditional English, Scottish, Welsh or Irish person applying for the same job.

In the murky world of race relations, when applying for a job, suitability and experience stand for nothing, because the colour of your skin is all that matters.

Bogus asylum seekers housed before Brits

More than 7,500 asylum seekers are living in Government-funded accommodation in Yorkshire according to new figures released by the Home Office.

Leeds Council bears the brunt of the influx having to house 2,015, followed by Bradford and Kirklees. That's accommodation for 7,500 that should be housing British people stuck on council housing lists and not bogus refugees arriving in Britain to cash in on our benefits system.

Beards on fire?

MUSLIM firefighters in West Yorkshire are angry that the service's new Religious and Cultural Needs Policy doesn't make provision for beards! Under the terms of the policy, prayer areas will be set aside at each fire station, along with special Halal food preparation areas. Muslim firefighters will even be given time off for their religious holidays. But they will still be prevented from growing beards as this could interfere with breathing equipment or pose a fire hazard.

Oldhammers lose out on new homes

STATE-of-the-art houses built in Selwyn Close, Oldham, have all been occupied by Asian families.

The 18 purpose built homes were specifically designed for Muslims with up to seven bedrooms, bathrooms that face away from Mecca, and kitchens that comply with halal cuisine.

ASIANS ONLY: 7-bedroom homes.

But the £3 million project, which was developed by a local housing association, has been accused of providing preferential treatment for the town's Pakistani population, and ignoring the needs of traditional Oldhammers. Even Ted Cattle, the man who led the inquiry into the 2001 Oldham race riots, warned that some members of the community may feel left out. "On the one hand the housing association has to be commended for thinking about those with special needs but they also have to think about how those families and that group is going to be integrated into the wider community," he said.

GLADSTONE PRIMARY SCHOOL: Serves an area near to the city centre and stands on the site of what was once St Mark's Junior Boys' School. Today the majority of the 400 pupils have English as a second language. The faces of these primary school pupils give an indication as to the make-up of the population of Peterborough in years to come.

BNP councillor pens song about the changes in Savile Town

MANY a warm summer evening was spent sat on the Post Office steps in Savile Town, listening to Radio Caroline.

Towards the railway bridge, Gaunts' chippy usually provided Saturday lunch, complemented by Ben Shaw's Dandelion and Burdock of course. The opposite side of Gaunts and near to the bridge was a little ginnell which led down towards a small barn type industrial building, the other side of which was the scout and brownies' hut.

Across to the rec' were the allotments where the ten o'clock gun at Wormalds & Walkers would be heard and over the wall from that was Savile Town Working Mens' Recreation and Bowling Club, opened in 1910.

THAT'S part of an article that appeared in Freedom in July, when Steve Bradley mourned the loss of the town he grew up in. The report prompted the British National Party's councillor for Dewsbury, Colin Auty, to pen a song about the changes that have taken place in Savile Town.

Colin Auty plays in a local Irish band called Red Claire which includes COLIN AUTY: Playing for the charity event called 'The Battle Of The Bands' at a pub in the ward where he is a councillor.

Bradford BNP councillor Paul Cromie and Dewsbury BNP activist Frank Attack, as well as three other musicians. Colin is as well known in the BNP for his music as he is a councillor. His style is a mixture of folk and ballads with both serious and amusing lyrics, and he doesn't only play for fun but has also been involved in numerous events for charity.

Savile Town, Where's It Gone?

Ali's shops on the corner
And there's Mosques all over town
24 hours a day Kebab house
Asian taxis run by Crown
This little piece of England
Green and often pleasant land
Why the hell am I complaining
And why don't I understand - And I say

Where is the Chapel
Where my Grandma used to pray
Where is the alehouse
Where my father drank each day
Where is the butcher's shop

Our mam would buy her pork Where have all the white folks gone Who used to stop and talk

The bookies halfway down our street
As long since gone as well
And Dr Watson's been replaced
By a man they call Patel
It's curried rice and foreign dips
No British fish and chips
And the languages that we hear all day
Come from foreign lips - And I say

Where is the Chapel Where my Grandma used to pray...

The Bowling Green and veterans' club
Are now a ghostly past
It's mainly used for cricket now
Bangladesh were batting last
If it's drugs you lack, you'll find your smack
And the dealer promise for
If next time you pass you'll bring a lass
Of twelve and not much more - And I say

Where is the Chapel Where my Grandma used to pray...

A racist race relations officer!

A RACE relations officer from A Porthcawl has been given 12-month community supervision order for calling a policeman a "white pig" and refusing a Breathalyser test after he was involved in a traffic accident. Muzaffar Chowdhury works for the Bridgend Community Cohesion Group which promotes racial harmony. Magistrates in Bridgend heard that police were called to a pub car park after Chowdhury's car was in a minor collision with another car. Constable Scott Howe arrived and was met with a torrent of abuse from Chowdhury, who shouted at police: "You don't know who you're dealing with. I know people and one call and I will be out. You're all racists." Chowdhury, who had been convicted in 1986 for actual bodily harm and assaulting a police officer, also had convictions for drink driving.

Anti-racist book burners boost 'Sambo' sales

A long-running campaign to stop an Antiquarian bookseller in Cumbria stocking the famous children's story 'Little Black Sambo' backfired after demand for the book 'went through the roof' following the local newspaper reports of attempts to ban it.

Anti-racist campaigners wanted the Whitehaven bookshop to stop selling Helen Bannerman's fairy tale, which was set in India, and remove all copies from its shelves.

But the publicity has only increased demand with the bookshop selling SIX HUNDRED copies of the book in the last two years.

BESTSELLER: Ban backfired.

BNP beat Lib-Dems in 5 out of 7 contests

NO wonder Liberal Democrat leader 'Ming' Campbell spent much of the month of December touring the media outlets in London attacking the BNP! His Party was smarting from a mauling at the polls by the British National Party - beaten in five of the seven seats both contested.

It was two out of two defeats for the Lib-Dems in North Wales where the BNP polled well in its first efforts in Prestatyn and Conwy County.

Candidates Ian Si'Ree and James Shortland were delighted with both their votes and the reception BNP canvassers received on the doorstep in an area where the BNP is starting to make an impact.

In one of the seats where the Lib-Dems did beat the British National Party - Lemington in Newcastle - it is facing investigation for over-spending on their expenses after putting out TEN items of literature.

In that election BNP candidate Ken Booth, polled an excellent 15.2% and pushed the Tories into 4th place.

"The Tories came out of the starting blocks firing on all cylinders, launching what it called 'the Cameron effect revival in Newcastle', but this was a complete non-starter and the Conservative candidate was comprehensively beaten," Ken told Freedom.

He also reported that there was anger amongst voters over a full-colour glossy smear leaflet was put out in the ward by the trade union Unison.

"This leaflet would have cost around £500 - more than twice the amount we spent - and there was anger on the doorstep at this gross misuse of union members' money."

There were good results in Southend in the South East where Terence Jellis came second, beating Labour and the Lib-Dems, and Barnsley in South Yorkshire where Malcolm Jennings polled 18.6% and received more than twice as many votes as the Liberal Democrats. There was a somewhat disappointing vote in Walsall in the West Midlands where Dominic Bugler polled 11.2% but still managed to beat the Lib-Dems and UKIP.

TRISHA SCOTT: Attracted a quarter of the votes in Hertford, the most rural ward in Scarborough.

The British National Party polled a quarter of the votes in the Hertford ward for Scarborough Council in a straight fight with the Tories.

Trisha Scott polled 267 votes, which was 26.6% of the total votes cast, in what is Scarborough's southern-most ward covering the rural area south and south west of Filey and including the villages of Hunmanby, Speeton, Muston, Flixton, Folkton, Reighton and Primrose Valley.

Probably the result that attracted the most media attention was Richard Trower's promising 13.2% in Denne Ward for Horsham Council in Sussex. Richard polled as many votes as the Labour Party, UKIP and Independent candidates put together, a feat that was picked up by the local newspapers in reports for the BNP first election foray in the town.

KEN BOOTH: Polled 15.2% of the vote in Newcastle's Lemington Ward.

British National Party WHERE WE STAND

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and the scandal of bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the billions now wasted in foreign aid to fund generous 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the EU for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside; a ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need and an end to field trials of genetically modified crops.

FARMING & FISHING: The regeneration of British farming, with the objective of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food. The restoration of the fishing industry through protection of our traditional fishing grounds.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: A massive expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The adoption of popular referenda and high technology direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Armed Forces and cost thousands of jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last thing. Like all other democratic political parties, the BNP includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of the other parties. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

Please help us all you can

The British National Party made further progress along the road to gaining more political influence within our country with a very good set of local election results on May 4th 2006. Now it is vital that we build on these gains, so the campaign for the May 3rd 2007 round of local elections must start now. Funds are desperately needed to help finance this 'push for power' - please help all you can.

I enclose a donation to the BNP for £.....

Supermarkets are putting dairy farmers out of business

BRITAIN'S dairy farmers are disappearing fast because the Government has stood by and allowed them to be put out of business by the greed of the supermarkets.

Producing milk for the nation is the vital role of dairy farmers and up until ten years ago it was profitable for those involved, the farmer, the processor and the retailer.

But then the supermarkets started pressurizing suppliers in order to increase the profit made on this essential foodstuff, forcing down prices so far that the farmer now only receives 17p a litre for milk which costs him 19p a litre to produce.

Unless our dairy farmers receive the Government protection they need from the greed of supermarkets, within five years Britain will be forced to rely on foreign milk imports.

LOST FOREVER: For every farmer forced out of business, a dairy herd is lost to the nation.

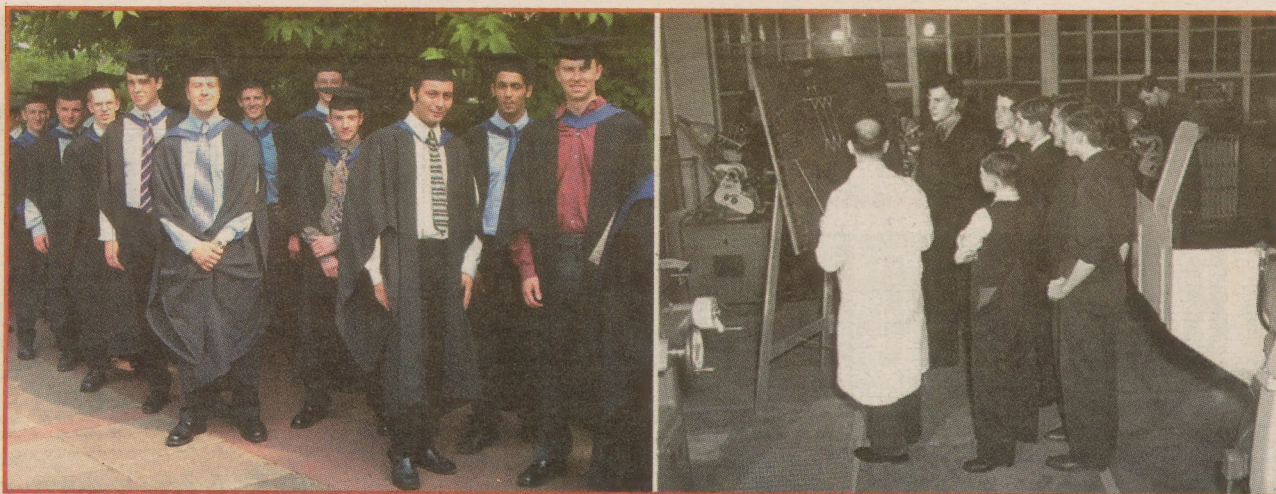

Salmonella in imported eggs

ONE in every eight boxes of Spanish eggs imported into Britain is infected with salmonella.

Food inspectors checking corner shops in London and northwest England, discovered salmonella on the shells in 157 boxes tested as well as finding the bacteria inside eggs.

The infected eggs came from just three farms in Spain.

Over 10% of eggs sold in the UK are imported, with most foreign eggs being used in the catering industry, especially for making sandwiches.

BLAIR'S BRITAIN: Everyone must go to 'uni' even if they are just pretend universities giving out pretend degrees in 'Media Studies'. They would be better off at a technical school training as engineers and craftsmen.

Our young people should be training for a proper job

LAST year more students sat LA-Levels exams, more students passed A-Levels exams, and more of them got Grade A's in those exams, allowing the Government to hail this as a triumph for New Labour.

Anyone who dared query the value of these qualifications was denounced as "insulting to the achievements of schoolchildren and hurtful to their feelings" - although not as insulted and hurt as the students themselves will be when they find their new qualifications are increasingly worthless in the real world.

In fact the figures are a reflection of failure, not success. In Tony Blair's Britain, political correctness deems that no one must be branded a 'failure' which makes achieving success meaningless. PC defines success as achieving academic qualifications like GCE's and university degrees, so everyone must be made to seek and indeed get these, however devalued, worthless and irrelevant they are.

"... political correctness deems that no one must be branded a 'failure' which makes achieving success meaningless ..."

New Labour and the Tories have sabotaged the great vision behind the 1944 Education Act. An Act proposed by the Conservative R.A. Butler, but in fact, mainly devised by supporters of the last traditional Labour leader, Clement Attlee.

They were inspired by the understanding that the purpose of education is to allow every child, regardless of their parents' wealth and social background, to fulfil their innate potential to best benefit society and the nation. Innate potential unique to each child, not 'equal' but, if correctly realized, potentially of equal worth to a society that needs plumbers as much as professors, fitters as much as filing clerks, labourers as much as lawyers.

The idea of the 1944 Act was to offer three types of education suited to three broad types of people. For workers by brain, academic, 'grammar' schools. For workers by craft, technical schools, and for workers by hand, modern secondary schools which would not try to force them to fail on academic terms.

When the potential of each child became evident, thought to be at age 11, a selection process, not intended to be a sudden-death one off test, would funnel them toward the type of education best suited to their needs.

Sadly, that vision was sabotaged because of the failure of Labour and the Tories to properly resource the technical schools, which should have been turning out engineers and craftsmen, plumbers, carpenters, mechanics and electricians at every level from tradesman to designer and manager.

These should have been as good an alternative for those who were suitable as grammar schools. In fact, very few were built and this sector was eventually absorbed into the equally under-resourced secondary moderns. The final nail in the coffin of the 1944 vision was the replacing a 'horses for courses' approach with 'one size fits all' - the disaster of comprehensive education. Comprehensive schools piled everybody into one place. The result was to impose a single school culture on all pupils in each comprehensive.

"The 11-plus was a selection process to funnel children towards the education that best suited their needs ..."

The end result was to replace selection by ability with selection by home postcode and therefore by wealth. Middle-class areas got schools with an academic ethos which got good academic grades and were seen as doing well. Poorer areas got schools with an anti-academic ethos, so that the only education they were offering failed, and even working class children who were academically able were forced to fail along with everyone else.

Political correctness, which both Labour and the Tories sign up to, insists that exams must be 'moderated' so nobody fails. Everyone must go to 'uni' even if they are just pretend universities giving out pretend degrees in 'Media Studies' to young people who would be better learning a real job like bricklaying or nursing.

Only the British National Party holds true to the vision offered in 1944 to all our children. An education that all can afford, which brings out the different talents of our children, so that each can fit securely into the web of different roles, all of which society needs and values.

Aussies beat the Arabs to take over Thames Water

THAMES Water is now owned by Australian banking group Macquarie, after it was sold off by its previous owner, the German energy group RWE. Macquarie had to beat off rival bidder, Qatar Investment Authority, to buy the firm.

Thames Water has 13 million customers in London and the South East who have faced a year of water use restrictions, yet still the company made record profits.

Australians, Arabs, Germans - what are they doing owning and making money out of what should be an essential service for the British people provided by the State?

Spanish snap up Scottish Power

SPANISH energy company Iberdrola's takeover of Scottish Power is the latest in a list of Spanish companies which have bought out British companies, including mobile phone provider O2, airports operator BAA and the Abbey National Building Society.

Scottish Power's five million customers now have to depend on a private Spanish company to provide an essential service which should be supplied by the State.

The takeover leaves just two major British energy suppliers left, Centrica and Scottish & Southern Energy.

US takes over London's City Airport

LONDON'S City Airport, located in the Docklands area of the capital, has been bought by US company AIG Financial Products and Global Infrastructure Partners (part-owned by Credit Suisse bank). The City Airport, with its short runway, opened in 1987 as a Short Take Off and Landing airport, suited to aircraft which can land and take off in a shorter distance than the larger jets seen at other London airports.

Fifteen airlines serve the airport which specialises in serving the business community with commuter flights to a range of cities in the UK and European cities including Paris, Brussels, Antwerp and Amsterdam.

Will the last one out turn off the lights

YET again more manufacturing jobs are being lost in Leicester.

This latest blow to a city with a proud manufacturing tradition comes from light bulb manufacturer GE Lighting which is closing its Melton Road factory and transferring the 380 jobs there to its works in Hungary, adding to the 120 jobs that have already gone overseas in the last 16 months.

GE Lighting, which was known as Thorn Lighting up until 1991, has been making light bulbs in Leicester for 60 years with production starting at the site which had been used to make parts for bomber aircraft.

The Melton Road factory holds a place in the heart of scores of Leicester folk. For many years it was a tradition for children to be driven past the factory by their parents in the first week in December, just to look at the fantastic Christmas lights display that was put on every year by Thorn Lighting.

In Britain today it's not just jobs that are being lost but memories of a generation too, all thanks to New Labour and its anti-British policies.

Imports from China hit Scottish wool producers

LOW COST cashmere goods, imported from China, are hitting Scottish woollen producers hard. The Chinese have been increasing their production of cashmere garments by 10% each year, gradually undercutting British manufacturers. In the past the Scottish industry imported the wool from the Kashmir goat using the underdown to make quality clothing. But now, as a result of the ending of the Multi Fibre Agreement which allows cheap Chinese imports to enter Europe, two Scottish cashmere producers have already been forced to close and the number of those employed in the industry, based largely in the Scottish Borders, has more than halved. Cashmere producers claim that the cheap Chinese products, which are branded as being '100% cashmere', in fact contain other fibres.

100%: It must be Scottish cashmere

Shower component jobs go to China

THERE was another blow to the Norfolk economy last month when a factory making parts for electric showers was closed and the 70 jobs transferred to China. The end of work at Heatrod Elements in Gorleston, follows the sale of the business by Heatrae Sadia Heating, a maker of electric water heaters. The new owners, Sweden's NIBE Industrier, announced the closure, explaining it was because: "China has lower rental costs, lower labour costs and lower water rates." This latest set of job losses follows 200 job losses at Hethel-based Lotus, Norwich Union revealing it was to shed 850 jobs in Norwich, and almost 300 people being made redundant with the end of production at New Jarrold Printing in Norwich.

Labour and the Tories have destroyed British Industry

by Steve Johnson

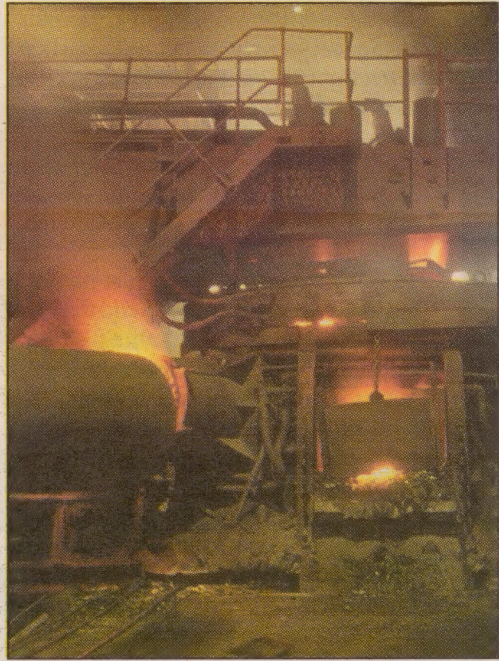

BRITISH steelmakers played a leading role in making our country the workshop of the world. Our country was the greatest economic power the world had ever known, bringing modern civilization to under-developed and technologically stagnant countries like India.

But now after generations of weak, corrupt and incompetent Government, Britain has become totally dependent on imported steel following an Indian company take over of what is left of the British steel industry.

A deal has been announced by which India's Tata Steel would take over Corus, the pathetic remnant of Britain's steel industry, already partly sold off to the Dutch. The take over will be completed by mid-January, and the asset-stripping and mass layoffs can begin.

Tata boss Ratan Tata, proclaimed on Indian TV that the take over was an act of revenge for the Raj and "his Diwali present to the Indian people" - his mouth clearly watering at the prospect of being able to shut down British steel plants like Port Talbot in Wales, Dalzell in Scotland, Teesside, Scunthorpe and Rotherham.

ECONOMIC POWER: Steel manufacturing helped make Britain the workshop of the world.

PORT TALBOT: Welsh steel jobs are bound for India. BRITISH STEEL: Redcar steelworkers in between the wars.

Steel plate made in Britain has to sell at $320 a tonne in order to pay British workers, with families and a mortgage, a living wage. Steel made in India's giant Jamshedpur plant sells at just $160 a tonne due to the cheapness of the workforce which sweats in its Third World furnaces.

This Third World take over of British steel will put tens of thousands of British steelworkers, and hundreds of thousands of workers whose jobs depend on the steelworkers, on the dole. They may get a stay of execution for a couple of years while Tata ramps up production at Jamshedpur from its current five million tonnes a year to ten million tonnes by 2010. But all the while he will be opening three other Indian steel plants to take advantage of his new access to British markets by making eventually 30 million tonnes of cheap Indian steel a year, flooding British markets and shutting down the whole of British steel production. Just a few smaller specialist plants, finishing steel into pipes and other produce, may just survive.

This Labour Government just like the Tories before them, has destroyed British industry.

Tony Blair and Gordon Brown have welcomed the deal. They feel free to do so because working-class steelmakers are 'Old Labour' and don't matter any more. New Labour has embraced the global market economy and campaigns on behalf of big business, lawyers, rich foreign plutocrats and the chattering classes rather than its once loyal traditional supporters. Still less do the Tories care - they flogged off our steel industry along with the rest of what even one of their own called "the family silver" in the Thatcher era. Only the British National Party can now save our steelworks, and save the jobs, family livelihoods and communities those steelworks sustain. The BNP will take British steel back into the ownership of the British people. Not just through state control - but by enabling the steelworkers themselves to part own their plants and enjoy the profits of their often hard and dangerous labours directly through workers' co-operatives. The BNP would ban foreign imports of steel along with anything else we can make or grow ourselves.

Supermarket greed and foreign imports cost British jobs

IT wasn't a happy Christmas for workers at Cherryridge Poultry, the country's third largest producer of poultry products.

The Norfolk firm closed its plant near Cromer in December with the loss of 75 jobs, blaming price pressure from supermarkets and foreign imports.

Cherryridge supplied turkeys to Tesco, but faced competition from companies based in Poland, Italy and Germany which source their chickens and turkeys from Brazil for half the price of UK poultry. More British job losses down to cheap foreign imports.

120 jobs lost as Scottish prawns get peeled in Thailand

PRAWNS and lobsters caught in Scottish waters are being shipped to Thailand for peeling before being returned to Scotland to be coated in breadcrumbs and sold as "Scottish Island" scampi.

Young's seafood company sends the shellfish on a 12,000 mile round trip taking nine weeks, to a processing plant in Thailand where the workers are paid just 25p an hour.

SCOTTISH PRAWNS: 12,000 mile round trip just to be peeled.

The move means the loss of 120 jobs at the Annan plant in Dumfriesshire, which is a devastating blow to the struggling rural economy of the area. It will also add to global warming with the transporting of 600 tonnes of shellfish to Bangkok leading to 300 tonnes of carbon dioxide emissions each year.

Now it's oil, whisky, tea and healthcare! Indian takeover gathers pace

THE take over of Britain's steel industry isn't the only example of Indians taking away British companies. It's an ongoing abduction taking in such industries as Scottish whisky distilleries, North Sea oil and even Tetley's teabags. Vijay Mallya's Kingfisher empire, spanning beer, spirits and airlines, is expected shortly to take over respected Scottish whisky distiller Whyte and Mackay. That means fine traditional malts like Isle of Jura and Dalmore will now be owned by Indians. Meanwhile Mukesh Ambani of Reliance has his eyes on our North Sea oil expertise. "We're looking at buying companies in North Sea oil, in Scotland" he boasts. His plan is to "acquire talent" to use its expertise to exploit Third World oil fields. The huge Indian Tata combine isn't just trying to take away our steel industry. They already own Tetley's

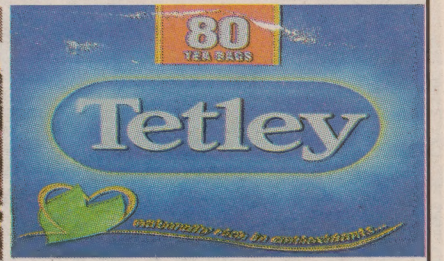

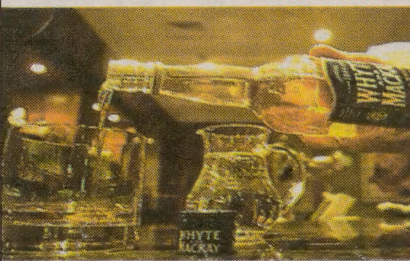

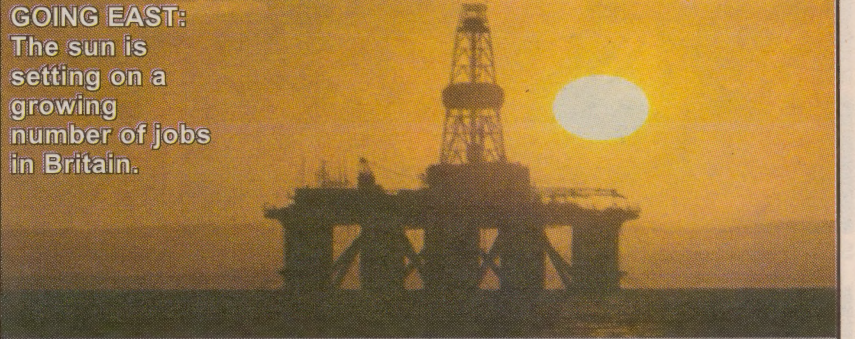

Tea, British auto and aviation engineers Incat, and, thanks to a £55 million deal earlier this year, Pearl Group's business processing. India's Apollo and Fortis private medicine companies are exploiting Labour's backdoor privatisation of the NHS to win lucrative taxpayer-funded NHS management contracts. It's just a matter of time before our hospitals and surgeries end up being run as well as staffed by Indians as British doctors and nurses are undercut by Third World labour. But this supposedly glorious Global Free Market is only free in one direction. Indian businesses can take over our companies but British firms can't take over Indian interests. A complex web of rules and regulations established by the Indian Government over many years has the express aim of making sure that Indian industry stays in Indian ownership.

This, in conjunction with a combination of import controls and a patriotic 'buy Indian' mentality instilled within the population, has ensured that of the top 20 brands of goods in the Indian market only five are not Indian owned.

India, like China and Japan, are building up a 'strong local industrial and commercial base, owned by its own people, behind strong Government walls aimed at keeping out cheap foreign goods and expensive foreign take overs.

Britain must do the same, and only the British National Party has such a policy in its manifesto. We are the only political party in Britain which does not support the sacrifice of our economy and our peoples' livelihoods on the altar of the Global Market Economy. Like the Indians, the Chinese and the Japanese, the BNP will put our own people first!

GOING EAST: The sun is setting on a growing number of jobs in Britain.

2006 Annual Conference

24th-26th November in Blackpool

Jerusalem
By William Blake

And did those feet in ancient time
Walk upon England's mountains green
And was the Holy Lamb of God
On England's pleasant pastures seen

And did the Countenance Divine
Shine forth upon our clouded hills
And was Jerusalem builded here
Among those dark Satanic mills

Bring me my bow of burning gold
Bring me my arrows of desire
Bring me my spear: O clouds, unfold
Bring me my chariot of fire

I will not cease from mental fight
Nor shall my sword sleep in my hand
'Till we have built Jerusalem
In England's green and pleasant land

SUNDAY CONFERENCE: Delegates in the main hall of the South Shore hotel wait for proceedings to get underway.

FRIDAY EVENING: Guests assemble for the Gala Dinner.

IN CHARGE: Eddy Butler and Roger Robertson.

SATURDAY: Small hall hosts a meeting of BNP councillors.

VOTING: Delegates' decision on a range of issues.

WELCOME: Chairman Nick Griffin, opens the British National Party's 2006 Annual Conference in Blackpool.

Taking the BNP to new levels of professionalism and effectiveness

TWO HUNDRED and fifty British National Party qualified voting members gathered in Blackpool for three days at the end of November for a national conference to take the BNP to new levels of professionalism and effectiveness.

A splendid Gala Dinner at a hotel on the seafront launched the weekend on the Friday evening, where Party Chairman Nick Griffin, delivered a passionate denunciation of the failure of the corrupt New Labour regime in its unsuccessful efforts to prosecute himself and Party colleague Mark Collett. £1 million of taxpayers' money was wasted in the pathetic campaign to gather evidence, carry out the police investigation over a 12 month period and in the two costly failed prosecutions at Leeds Crown Court.

Saturday saw a packed training day as delegates arrived from all parts of the United Kingdom. If the British National Party is to secure significant gains at all the forthcoming elections: municipal, regional assembly, Holyrood and the 2009 European elections, the Party needs a much larger activist base armed with the key skills of electioneering, media production and unit management to conduct winning campaigns.

The whole purpose of the training day was to address the skills gap and scores of recent new recruits proved themselves very willing to acquire all the skills necessary to run election campaigns. Even old and experienced hands were able to learn something new, availing themselves of new opportunities in media production and use of new technology.

Throughout the day there were practical workshops on election paperwork (Emma Colgate), mail merge leaflets (Steve Blake), canvassing (Sadie Graham), election strategy (Eddy Butler) and other key elements of our campaign for the 2007 local authority elections.

Delegates also heard about how liberalism is the number one enemy of the British people and how it can be successfully challenged by asymmetric political warfare (Nick Griffin), and an ideological address on the role of culture in British nationalist politics (Jonathan Bowden). There were also talks on the lessons learned from the past mistakes (Martin Wingfield), key historical figures in the history of our nation who inspired modern British nationalism (Steve Blake) and core reading for informed nationalists (Chris Beverley and Simon Darby).

It was a day of essential information which was well received by the delegates who will take the Party to the next level of success.

Sunday saw a full day of the Conference with internal procedural motions and external policy motions debated.

The motions were discussed by a variety of delegates, all with passion and enthusiasm, and demonstrate the broad range of policy issues the BNP is now ready and capable of debating. The wide range of professional experience acquired first hand in fields of employment, business, military service and personal endeavours which our growing leadership corps possesses will prove to be a key element in our winning strategy.

SOCIAL POLICY MOTION:

Our Party believes that we should oppose single sex civil partnerships.

Passed by a majority.

ECONOMIC POLICY MOTION:

Our Party believes we should adopt a package of proposals provided in a policy document about offshoring of service sector jobs.

Passed by a majority.

FOREIGN POLICY MOTION:

Our Party believes that British troops should be withdrawn from Iraq and Afghanistan.

Passed by a majority.

CONSTITUTIONAL POLICY MOTION:

Our Party believes that England should have its own Parliament.

Passed by a majority.

SOCIAL POLICY MOTION:

Our Party believes that the wearing of the burka in public should be banned.

Passed by a majority.

The warm welcome extended to the Party delegates from Blackpool's hoteliers, publicans and taxi drivers on a November weekend when many hotel owners decide to shut up shop for the winter, was reciprocated with a promise that the resort will play host to an even larger BNP National Conference in 2007.

OPPOSITION: The much publicised Labour Party and TUC demonstration against the BNP Conference managed to attract just 50-odd local officials.

Our delegates & officials have their say

Dr Andrew Emerson
(Sussex)Robert Walker
(Yorkshire)Jenny Noble
(West Midlands)Larry Nunn
(Northants)Denis Whiting
(Kent)Dr James Lewthwaite
(Bradford Councillor)Mark Collett
(Head of Publicity)Simon Darby
(Deputy Leader)Kenny Smith
(Head of Administration)Julian Leppert
(Redbridge Councillor)

LECTURERS: Emma Colgate on election paperwork and BNP website editor Steve Blake on election campaigning using 'the mail merge'.

Now that's entertainment!

SATURDAY EVENING: Delegates were treated to a real musical fiesta with Andy Holders (left), Gina Butler and Colin Auty (centre) and BNP Treasurer John Walker, keeping everyone entertained. But the biggest cheer of the evening came after David Hannam had sung the BNP's 2005 General Election song 'Corporal Fox'. This timeless classic will no doubt become a permanent part of Conference entertainment evenings in the years to come.

100 at Barking & Dagenham meeting

BARKING & Dagenham BNP closed its momentous year with a marvellous meeting addressed by Nick Griffin at a packed hall of 100 local people. The meeting was chaired by local councillor Richard Barnbrook, who started proceedings by lighting a candle on the top table to symbolise the plight of innocent political prisoner Kevin Hughes, who is still incarcerated at Her Majesty's pleasure on the evidence of a failed bogus asylum-seeker. As well as the British National Party chairman, the meeting also heard from Basildon organiser Chris Roberts. At the end of proceedings it was announced that Richard Barnbrook has been selected as the BNP's London Mayoral candidate for the elections in May 2008. The news received a thunderous standing ovation and helped towards a bumper collection of £400.

First meeting for Ashfield BNP

AT the end of last year the newly-formed Ashfield BNP held its first meeting.

Group Development Officer Sadie Graham, opened the meeting and explained why there was the need for the British National Party in Ashfield. Sadie was followed by organiser Mick Clarke, who detailed the political history of Ashfield and how this once solid Labour area had changed with voters had turning to independent councillors to represent them.

Mick talked about his own experience of standing in the recent by-election in Hucknall West and how it was vital that good candidates came forward to stand in May. He spoke enthusiastically about his plans for the group and the activities that are already taking place within Ashfield.

There was a general discussion about issues in the news which might be suitable for future campaigns and electioneering. A collection was taken and more funds were raised through a literature stall before members retired to a local pub to carry on the discussions. Hopefully Ashfield BNP will see a record number of BNP candidates standing in next May so voters can show sitting MP Geoff Hoon, how they have deserted Labour in their droves for the British National Party.

Why can't Melanie accept the BNP has changed?

AT THE end of last year in an article for the Jewish Chronicle the popular journalist Melanie Phillips, disappointingly attacked the British National Party using a flawed and out-dated argument. Alan Goodacre from the BNP's Policy Forum, responds to Melanie's claims in an effort to set the record straight.

What Melanie Phillips said:

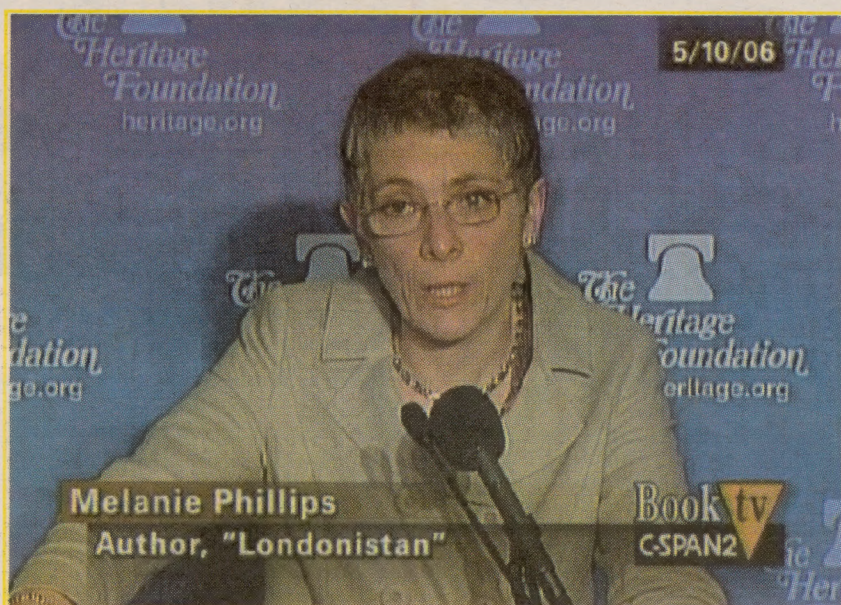

"In an attempt to shed its thuggish image and win votes, the BNP leadership has repeatedly claimed that it has renounced the party's defining anti-Semitism. In the BNP newsletter, party theorist John Bean criticised the 'Judeo-obsessives' in the ranks. With no sense of irony, he wrote that it was foolish to tar all Jews as villains when 'only some of them' were wrong-doers, and that they should be treated 'like any other foreign people' and as neither 'intrinsically evil nor always the enemy'.

Alan Goodacre replies:

Complaining that we consider only 'some' Jews bad, is absurd, unless you believe that all Jews, unlike the rest of fallen humanity, are always 100% good. Given that you have yourself, in your writings, criticised various Jews over the years, you do not yourself even believe this. Would you consider it unreasonable, for us to say that 'some' Britons, Americans, or Frenchmen are bad?

Melanie said:

"... the former BNP chairman John Tyndall has ranted about 'The wrath

MELANIE PHILLIPS: Trapped in a time warp with regard to the BNP.

and hatred of organised Jewry' which was on display in the 'insane war in Iraq' being waged in the interests of, guess who, Israel. Thus John Bean wrote: 'None of this is to deny, of course, that people like Paul Wolfowitz, who engineered a war in which British soldiers are dying to prop up a New World Order that plans the liquidation of Britain, are completely ruthless.'

Alan replies:

Quoting the discredited and expelled John Tyndall, to prove what the party believes today, is like quoting Michael Foot to prove what Tony Blair really thinks. Ms Phillips may approve of Mr Wolfowitz's actions. I would be happy to debate them with her in any public forum. But if, as she notes, our criticism of him is essentially the same as made by respectable liberal-establishment organs such as the Guardian, one can hardly take it as evidence we are fascists.

Melanie said:

"Like all fascist parties, the BNP manipulate for their own ends genuine concerns that the political class has brushed aside. The concern today is radical Islam. But the BNP's platform against Muslims masks a racist hostility towards immigrants, foreigners and Jews."

Alan replies:

You offer no explanation for how a party like ours, which endorses democracy, can possibly be a fascist party, given that contempt for democracy is of the essence of fascism.

Melanie said:

"The BNP believe Holocaust denial is essential to remove a major encumbrance to the destruction of democracy. The left have now invented their own form of Holocaust denial to remove a major encumbrance to the destruction of Israel."

Alan replies:

Our party no longer denies the Holocaust, an obvious historical fact.

Melanie said:

"They remain as obsessed with 'the Jewish question' as they ever were. The only thing that has changed is their strategy."

Alan replies:

The British National Party is not 'obsessed with the Jewish question', and in fact, does not consider it that important. But the whole world is obsessed with this small people, out of all proportion to its size, a fact reflected in such things as media coverage and political demonstrations around the world. Therefore, we must address an ideological issue people think is important, whether or not it really is.

We hope that our future conduct and campaigning may, in time, bring newspapers like the Jewish Chronicle and columnists like Melanie Phillips to understand that our repudiation of anti-Semitism is genuine. We are the only party in Britain that is truly serious about fighting the Islamofascist threat, so we have much to offer the Jewish community of Britain.

NICK GRIFFIN: Under his seven years at the helm of the British National Party, it has changed beyond recognition.

SALLY WOOD Straight talking!

Paying for BBC propaganda

ON THE evening before Nick and Mark's historic court victory the BBC ran a news item on the German NPD depicting it as the old Nazi party risen from the ashes. The report ended by saying that such parties were to be found in every country in Europe.

Was I alone, I wonder in feeling there was something sinister in the timing of this particular report. The NPD after all, was not making the news so why feature it the evening before the BNP verdict was due. Were the BBC hoping that the subliminal message conveyed within the report might influence the jury?

Certainly the BBC propaganda machine rolls on. Turning on the radio the other morning I felt its full force as it delighted in statistics that showed white working class boys are now the new underclass. Apparently only 17% are now attaining five or more good GCSE results against 19% amongst Afro-Caribbean boys. One parent interviewed voiced concerns that are apparent to us all - that greater priority is given to the needs of the ethnic minority children.

Certainly in the Medway Towns white youths can be seen in the evening hanging around recreation grounds and car parks and there seems to be no effort to engage these youngsters in more fruitful activities. When I was young, my brothers and their friends belonged to the ATC and the Sea Cadets and when they left school there were apprenticeships waiting for them. Today the youngsters feel they have no hope.

Apparently white working class boys perform well until the age of 14 years and it is then that they realise what a stark future without gainful employment awaits them and they become thoroughly disillusioned.

What about the statistics relating to middle class white boys? Of course these were not available, how convenient and what a pity! Once again the BBC refuses to give us the full story.

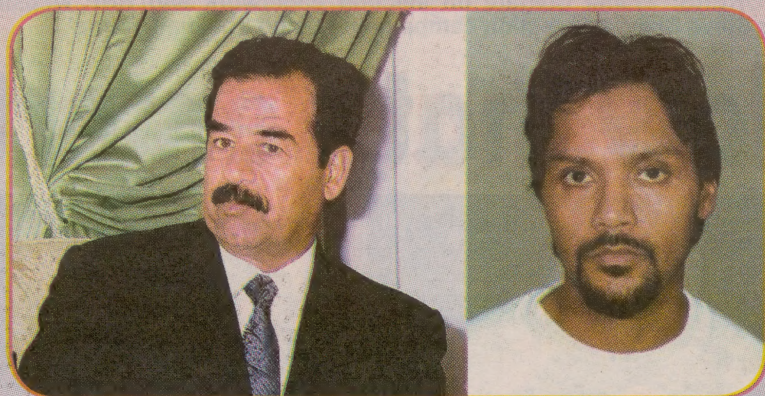

When you next go to buy your TV licence reflect on how you are paying for your own indoctrination.

AWAITING THE VERDICT: Surely the BBC wouldn't try to influence the jury!

Hypocrisy over hanging

DOUBLE STANDARDS: Saddam's for the chop but Dhiren Barot will spend 40 years being cared for by the country he sought to destroy.

THERE'S NO more unedifying spectacle than the rank hypocrisy of our political leaders as they greeted with quiet satisfaction the death sentence meted out to Saddam Hussein.

They should have condemned the sentence because they refuse to re-introduce it here in Britain when all the polls suggest that 70% of the population are in favour.

When an Italian lady was gunned down in London for her Rolex watch, it made me realise that without the ultimate deterrent, life loses its respect. It becomes worth nothing more than the bauble the murderer is seeking. Opponents of capital punishment suggest that those who approve of the death penalty should be prepared to carry out the sentence themselves. If they have not the stomach for it then they should not agitate for its restoration. What arrant nonsense. Carried to its logical conclusion one would therefore assume that meat eaters should be prepared to slaughter the animals they eat.

What too of the lack of justice handed out to traitors. The last man tried here for treason was William Joyce or Lord Haw Haw as he was known. He was convicted and hanged as a traitor although he wasn't actually British. We have recently witnessed the trial of Dhiren Barot who is a British citizen but who was working as an al-Qaeda operative. Are we not at war with al-Qaeda? Barot was plotting to strike at the very heart of our democracy and the security of the state and yet he was not deemed a traitor. He will not suffer the fate of Lord Haw Haw but instead we are expected to keep him for 40 years at Her Majesty's pleasure.

Christians preach forgiveness but even Jesus could not bring himself to forgive his enemies, instead he asked God to. Murderers and traitors should be dispatched from this world and let God decide whether they deserve forgiveness.

Dear Melanie

DAVID HOLBROOKE from Carmarthen takes Melanie Phillips to task over her article in the Daily Mail in which she called the BNP 'vile'.

"I AM a big fan of yours. I buy your books, read your articles and enjoy your television appearances because I agree with almost everything you have to say. But how dare you call the BNP vile!

Over the last twenty years there has been a steady decline in the standing of our politicians in the eyes of the public and now very few believe what they have to say. That's not the case with Nick Griffin and the British National Party. This man has integrity and he speaks the truth. The Government put him on trial to try to silence him, but he was found 'not guilty' because ordinary British citizens decided that no one should be punished for telling the truth.

Melanie, please take another look at the British National Party. It's growing despite being continually attacked by the media because ordinary people are beginning to realise that it is not a nazi, fascist or racist party, but simply a patriotic party which wants to give the British people their country back.

A patriotic party which wants to give the British people their country back

My family was always Labour and as a youngster I helped my father at the 1946 election. Socialism was in my blood and working for the Labour Party should have been my life's work, but that hasn't been the case. Five years ago I joined the British National Party and the more I read the literature and the more I meet its members, the more I like it. You can call me what you like but I know what I am. I've always been a patriot who has worked all his life and tried to uphold certain standards despite much of the country descending into chaos because it has been betrayed by government after government."

Yours, David

Labour & the Tories have destroyed our rail network

B RITISH rail operator First TransPennine Express, is replacing its fleet of British-built diesel trains with trains built in Germany.

The Class 158 train, built by BREL in Derby, and the Class 175 which was built near Birmingham, will be replaced by the German-built Class 185 this month.

The Class 185 is built by Siemens and will operate routes from Newcastle, Manchester Airport, Scarborough, Cleethorpes and the Lake District.

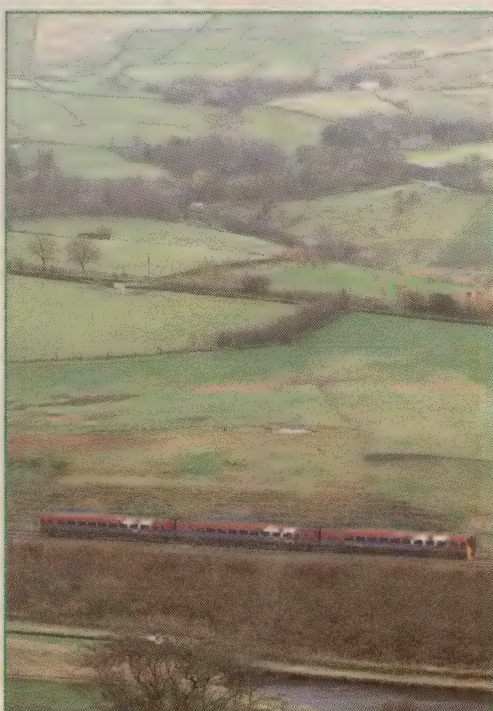

But the change hasn't been welcomed by passengers because the German-built train has fewer seats in a three carriage train than its British predecessor leaving more peak time passengers having to stand and experiencing a less comfortable journey.

Last year the once world famous steel rail manufacturing industry at Workington in Cumbria closed, moving production overseas, and now our train building operation is gradually being dismantled as well. What a sorry state of affairs in a country that gave railways to the world. The first railway opened on 27th September 1825 between Stockton and Darlington with a train hauling thirty-six carriages consisting of passengers, coal and flour. In 1830 the famous Rocket steam locomotive (still thankfully preserved in the London Science Museum) operated on the Liverpool to Manchester railway.

Successive Labour and Tory Governments have destroyed our rail network, leaving a disjointed service relying on foreign imports to function.

A British National Party government would nationalise the railways and ensure that trains and the rails they run on are made in Britain, in British factories by British workers.

CLASS 158: The British-built train provided more seats for peak-time passengers.

Now they even want to build on the local dog track

W ITH 1,500 migrant workers, immigrants, asylum seekers and refugees arriving on Britain's doorstep each day, it's no wonder that this Labour government needs every available bit of land to build new houses on.

In Hinckley in Leicestershire it's the local greyhound stadium that's being earmarked for 89 new builds. But thankfully local British National Party members have launched a 'Save Our Stadium' campaign to urge Hinckley and Bosworth Council not to concrete over the Nutts Lane track.

Local BNP spokesman Wayne McDermott, told Freedom:

"A night out at the dogs is very popular and provides all-round family entertainment and gets people out from sitting in front of the telly.

"It is vital that we keep hold of such places of traditional culture which are an important part of a British way of life to many people. They've grown up going down the local track to watch the racing with their dads and grandads.

"Currently there's a debate about getting children out into the fresh air, involved in family activities, and away from their computers, yet the Government wants to build on one of the 20 or so greyhound stadiums left in the country. Hinckley Greyhound Stadium is somewhere families can go together and be entertained.

"Local people know the reason why so many new houses have to be built. As the EU expands and more people come here to settle due to our over generous benefit system more accommodation is needed. As the South East and London become over-crowded, White flight comes to the East Midlands."

Labour returns Britain to the dark days of uncontrolled development

LABOUR'S plans to financially reward the councils which build the most new houses will give developers a free hand and marks a return to the dark days of uncontrolled development.

The Government wants councils 'to deliver higher levels of housing' but takes no account of their ability to provide the extra services, schools, health care and social services to match vast numbers of newcomers arriving in the area.

The infrastructure in many of our towns is already at breaking point and any development plans will add to that pressure. Bribing councils with financial incentives to allow housing developments, just brings their planning departments into disrepute and undermines public confidence that any new build plans would ever be vetoed. But Labour doesn't give a damn about this. If the local councils don't play ball, the Government will just centralise planning control to ensure that developers can build where and whenever they want.

EU directive compromises safety on the Thames

THAMES: Special tidal conditions.

EUROPEAN Union meddling in the rules and regulations of those working on the River Thames could lead to accidents and loss of life.

A new EU directive adopted by the Labour Government this month, more than halves the qualifying period and the qualifications for new captains' licences and reduces the college courses required by applicants. According to one skipper the new directive is a recipe for disaster because it takes no account of the special conditions on the Thames.

"No other river in Europe has the same tidal conditions as the Thames, where captains have to calculate the height of the river every day," he said.

"The German Government secured an exemption for captains on the River Rhine and Danube, but our Government didn't bother to get one for the Thames.

"Five million people a year use the Thames for pleasure purposes and these new reduced qualifications are bound to mean a compromise on safety."

Of course, it's all our fault

TOM ap Rhys Pryce wasn't murdered by Donnel Carty and Delano Brown just for his travel card and mobile telephone. According to a study funded by the Economic and Social Research Council, his murder was more to do with his attackers gaining satisfaction from overpowering him and obtaining dominance in order to boost their self esteem, rather than financial gain.

Labour, Conservative and Liberal Democrat politicians have been wringing their hands in dismay at such a crime, but claiming that Carty and Brown are also victims. Apparently they 'never had a chance in life' due to discrimination and racism within British society, and their only way of venting their frustration at such injustice was to boost their self-esteem. They did this through 'street cred' - by summarily dealing with anyone who failed to show them due respect.

Labour, Conservative and the Liberal Democrats say British society is to blame, that it is our fault killers like Carty and Brown feel so alienated.

The British National Party believes it is the Westminster politicians who are to blame for imposing a multi-cultural society on Britain without first consulting the British people.

and it's our fault again

THE rioting and arson at the Harmondsworth Immigration Detention Centre began after the findings of a report, which alleged bullying by guards at the centre, was broadcast on television.

Once inmates saw on TV just how badly they were being treated all hell broke loose. Fires were started in all four wings with inmates fuelling the flames by smashing up every table and chair in the complex.

Labour, Conservative and Liberal Democrat politicians were wringing their hands in dismay at such a disturbance, arguing that the rioters were not to blame for the mayhem and arson. Chief prisons inspector Anne Owers said that six in ten of the 482 immigration detainees held at the centre claimed they felt unsafe and nearly half claimed staff victimised them. Apparently bogus asylum seekers and illegal immigrants shouldn't be treated as prisoners just for coming to the UK in search of a more comfortable lifestyle.

Labour, Conservative and the Liberal Democrats say British society is to blame - that it is all our fault that immigrants can't just arrive on our shores and immediately be assimilated into the population.

The British National Party believes it is the Westminster politicians who are to blame for allowing unrestricted immigration into Britain against the clear wishes of the British people.

and it's our fault again!

WHEN 52 people were killed at the hands of four suicide bombers in London on 7th July 2005 it was assumed that they had lost their lives at the hands of fanatical Islamic terrorists.

Labour, Conservative and Liberal Democrat politicians have been deeply dismayed by the fact that all four bombers were British-born Pakistanis - how could four 'average British lads' want to inflict so much pain on their fellow Britons? The old gang politicians say the bombers were prompted into their actions because of lack of job opportunities and alienation from society due to inherent racism.

Labour, Conservative and the Liberal Democrats say British society is to blame - that it is all our fault that young Muslim men feel so angry and unable to integrate better into our way of life.

The British National Party believes it is the Westminster politicians who are to blame for allowing two million Muslims to settle in Britain and encouraging the promotion of Islam within our schools.

Is it all our fault, or are the old gang politicians to blame? Give your verdict on Thursday 3rd May.

LEICESTER BNP: Keeping alive the spirit of our traditional children's Christmas Party.

Tories thinking BNP

I HAVE just read from cover to cover issues Nos. 77 and 78 of Freedom which were given to me by a friend - they were riveting and I couldn't put them down.

The topics covered are so relevant to the worries facing the indigenous population of the Britain we live in today.

You seem to have covered all the concerns of the population of this once proud country, which is in my opinion, being dragged into the mire because of the failed social engineering project of multi-culturalism.

We need to pull the country up by its bootlaces and get it back on its feet, marching proudly back to that freedom, self respect, independence and well-being we all used to enjoy! Being a lifelong Tory I must admit I am not a BNP member yet, but having talked to some of your members on the internet and the way the present Conservative Party is behaving, I can't see myself staying within it for much longer. As a matter of interest, I am surprised at the number of people in my circle of friends that are thinking and talking about the British National Party!

At Wood, Horley, Surrey.

Speaking out on Islam

RECENT comments by General Sir Richard Dannatt, the Chief of Staff of the Armed Services, seem to echo statements made by the British National Party.

He said:

"Our society has always been embedded in Christian values; once you have pulled the anchor up there is a danger that our society moves with the prevailing wind."

"There is an element of the moral compass spinning. I think it is up to society to realise that is the situation we are in."

"When I see the Islamist threat in this country I hope it doesn't make undue progress because there is a moral and spiritual vacuum in this country."

If only more public figures had the courage to make their views known on the growing influence of Islam within the UK, then the population wouldn't be so timid when confronted by Islam. Planning applications for mosques would be opposed more vigorously and objections would be raised at the promotion of non-Christian religions within our schools.

Mrs Linda Roberts, St Neots.

LETTERS to the Editor

Loss of the steelworks

CORUS in Scunthorpe produces top quality steel. What was once the British Steel Corporation is still involved in expansion, improving skills and updating the knowledge base of its workforce.

But now the future is uncertain with take over bids by Tata of India and CSN of Brazil. The rumour mill in the town is working overtime, with the latest one implying that the last job at Scunthorpe will be to build steelwork superstructures and despatch them to India for a new factory there.

When that's complete, the Scunthorpe works will be shut down and all the mill equipment shipped to India to join the heavy section mill which has been dismantled and sent to India.

Scunthorpe would be devastated by the loss of the steelworks and unemployment would go through the roof. No wonder steelworkers are leaving the Labour Party in their droves and joining the BNP.

Sean Hadley, Scunthorpe.

Taxing the silent majority

SO this Labour Government swants people who live in areas with good schools and low crime rates to have to pay more council tax - what a surprise!

Under the scheme all 21 million homes in England would be revalued according to their location as well as size and features.

The current banding system would be scrapped and replaced with an annual bill levied at 0.78% of the value of each property. Local Government Minister Phil Woolas, says the market price for dwellings may well be influenced by levels of crime amongst many other factors.

And all this comes on top of the idea of charging households an additional £200 for collection of non recyclable rubbish, conveniently ignoring that the council tax is supposed to already include rubbish collection expenses. Isn't this typical of the Labour Party to target Britain's loyal silent majority once again.

Carlos Cortiglia, London.

Out of touch as usual

JUST listened to Ming Campbell on Jon Gaunt's Talksport slot and the Liberal Democrat leader says he is very worried about the progress of the BNP.

Perhaps that's why he's stopped banging on ad nauseam about proportional representation.

He described the 7/7 bombers and their sympathisers as victims of 'deprivation and poorly educated'. The reality is quite the contrary, British-born Muslim extremists are more often than not, middle class and university educated which is where they were radicalised.

The Lib-Dems proving themselves totally out of touch as per usual.

Rory Allanson, London.

Measured yet inspiring

I SAW all the news coverage, the majority of it live, of the scenes outside Leeds Crown Court and was very impressed with the conduct and performance of Nick Griffin, Mark Collett and the BNP supporters present.

Nick is starting to play the diplomatic, political, measured game impressively, articulating mainstream concerns succinctly and sympathetically. Meanwhile the BBC, the CPS, Gordon Brown and West Yorkshire Police looked foolish, out of touch and biased. Sky News particularly relished quoting the criticism of the BBC.

The BNP supporters and their spokesmen came over as measured, patriotic and inspiring in an ever increasing war of heated words and ideologies. Next comes the liberal backlash from the sore losers.

Sandra Leyman, Woking.

Our history & Islam

JUST what on earth is Foreign Secretary Margaret Beckett, talking about! ("Islam is very much part of our history", Freedom 78). Not since the Middle Ages and King Richard it isn't!

In my 67 years living in various parts of East London, I can assure her that Islam was never in evidence or thought worthy of a mention in our Christian country, so opposite is it in its traditions, customs and habits. That is until New Labour opened the floodgates.

Islam is fine in Islamic countries, but not in ours. It simply does not belong here and is totally foreign to all that we stand for.

Mr. A. Easton, Elm Park.

Exclusive to British National Party members

Cromwell Club dines in style

by John Ryde

BRITISH National Party members and guests living in North West Leicestershire attended the inaugural dinner of the newly formed Cromwell Club.

This is a 'black tie' dining club to introduce potential new members to the British National Party in convivial surroundings and also to raise funds for the Party.

The venue for the evening was a striking period property resting in beautiful Leicestershire countryside which is ideal for small, intimate and professional gatherings.

We arrived to sherry and canapes in a homely, friendly bar where we introduced ourselves to new friends and met up with old ones.

We were called in to dine in the baronial splendour of a panelled dining room complete with a magnificent log fire and candles.

The food and service was excellent as was the selection of wines available, and we were entertained at the tables by a young gentleman who is the youngest member of the magic circle.

His card tricks right under our noses brought rounds of applause. (Just how did he do that - it must be magic?)

After scrumptious mouth watering sweets and cheese, biscuits and coffee the stage was set for our guest speaker Jonathan Bowden.

Jonathan needed no introduction to the British National Party members present. To the guests on the other hand, his forthright and articulate delivery presenting the reality of our Party, and destroying the lies and smears of the media, was a revelation.

There can be no doubt that from the impression created we look forward to the growing influence of the BNP in North West Leicestershire, and a growing numbers of new members. A substantial sum of money was raised for Party's funds.

BARONIAL SPLENDOUR: Jonathan Bowden addresses the Cromwell Club.

Join the BNP today!

THE telephone hasn't stopped ringing in the British National Party's Membership Office since the jury at Leeds Crown Court handed

TINA WINGFIELD:
The British National Party's Membership Secretary.
"We must be Britain's fastest growing political party."

down their 'NOT GUILTY' verdict to Nick Griffin and Mark Collett.

"We must be the fastest growing political party in Britain today," says Membership Secretary Tina Wingfield. "I can't believe that the Labour Party, the Tories or the Lib-Dems are signing up new members for 2007 at the rate we are when the year hasn't even started yet."

Because of the influx of new members and record levels of renewals during November and December, there is now a four-week turnaround time on the cards being sent out.

"We are working as hard as we can to process applications within this period," reports Tina. "It's a sign of how popular the BNP is, that we already have this backlog to cope with in January."

There's one special request from the Membership Office - please don't telephone within that four week period to ask where your membership card is. Dealing with such requests ties up staff and delays the process further. Please be patient.

HIGH STREET STALL: Andy Swaddle, George Bainbridge and Keith McFarlane sold 91 copies of Freedom in just a couple of hours.

D-Day George puts a Labour Party liar in his place!

GEORGE Johnson, a D-Day veteran and senior Gateshead BNP member led a very successful papersale in Gateshead High Street. Together with Ken Booth, Andy Swaddle, George Bainbridge and Keith McFarlane he sold 91 copies of Freedom within a couple of hours. Everyone was very upbeat after the excellent by-election result in Lemington in nearby Newcastle which shot David Cameron's Tory revival in the North East out of the water. A Labour Party official from Gateshead Unison called George a nazi and said we should all be ashamed ourselves as British people fought against nazism in World War II! George said:

"I know I was one of them and am equally proud to be here today standing up for Britain again".

The Labour official then went and complained to the police about our presence but when they came to the stall they confirmed it was a legal street activity and everything was in order. George talked to many people and several fellow D-Day and WWII veterans about his experiences. All of them were united in the belief that our treacherous politicians had given away everything that they fought for and all are 100% behind the British National Party in this second Battle of Britain.

Third BNP councillor co-opted in Brinsley

THE Broxtowe group has just had its third British National Party member co-opted onto Brinsley Parish Council, with Dave Brown joining fellow BNP councillors Nina Brown and Sadie Graham.

Sadie, who stood for the BNP in the borough elections in 2003 receiving 43%, is currently vice-chairman of the Planning Committee, is on the Finance Committee and also on the Youth of Brinsley Committee.

Support for the BNP in the village has grown since 2003 due to regular meetings, fundraisers, and a constantly increasing Freedom door-to-door paper-round. Cllr Nina Brown is the organiser of the Broxtowe group, which had over 120 people at their last meeting. Cllr Dave Brown signs up new members every week, sometimes 5 or 6 per evening.

The East Midlands is the only region to have co-opted British National Party councillors, with a total of 5 co-opted parish councillors and one district councillor. There are government plans in the pipeline to increase the power held by Parish and Town councils, with the possibility of scrapping the Borough and District councils. This means that Parish Councils will have far greater power and responsibility in local decision making.

If you want to find out more information about the co-option of local councillors and how to go about applying for co-option then contact Sadie Graham at groupdevelopment@bnp.org.uk

Leicester's role in development of English identity and culture

By John Ryde

LEICESTER Branch held their December meeting in an atmosphere of Christmas good cheer at a seasonally decorated rural village venue in an area of diversity deprivation.

Once again the meeting was well attended with a few folk standing at the back. There were a significant number of new members and first time attendees, and chairman Geoff Dickens welcomed them with a brief explanation of how we ran meetings. Paul Preston gave a short, cynical and humorous resume of recent political events as seen through his eyes.

There was a report from Melton Mowbray outlining the progress now being made in this rural area of Leicestershire and inviting everyone to a social evening and quiz in the town.

Wayne McDermott, regional election officer, spoke about building on the recent election success of beating the Tories and Lib-Dems into 3rd and 4th place in Shelthorpe, Loughborough, and urged people to consider what they could do to help in May 2007. Graham Eustace then spoke on the subject of 'fairness' saying that many things in life were not fair, especially the treatment that the BNP and the British people receive, but said that things will not change until we make them change.

During the interval tea, coffee, chocolate biscuits and hot mince pies were served.

Our main speaker after the interval was the web site manager Steve Blake, whose theme was "A Journey Through Time".

Steve found modern day living an 'Alice in Wonderland' existence. The events of today beggar belief as they become more bizarre.

Travelling back 2,000 years, he explained how our ancestors had toiled at the land, introduced inventions and industry to make Britain the foremost country in the world, and gave examples of how Leicestershire had played a significant part in this development of an English identity and culture.

Steve finished his speech by giving a chilling account of how we would spend Christmas 2036 if the present 1984 style of government was to continue, and then alternatively how it would be if there was a Nationalist government.

It was an extremely thought-provoking talk, and a challenge to become involved in our struggle. Steve received a standing ovation.

CHRISTMAS IN LEICESTER: What will it be like in 2036 asked Steve Blake?

MENSA member addresses Stockport BNP on global warming

GARY Aronsson from Kirby was the guest speaker at the December meeting of Stockport BNP.

Gary has stood repeatedly as a BNP candidate in local council elections in his home town where he is making real inroads into Labour's once rock solid support in Whitefield Ward. He is a member of MENSA which makes a nonsense of the media's crude portrayal of British National Party members as 'knuckle draggers'.

He is no stranger to Greater Manchester as in 2005 he stood as the parliamentary candidate for Heywood & Middleton and came within a handful of votes of saving his deposit.

Gary spoke in detail about the threat from global warming, giving his own assessment of the problem the world faces. A lively question and answer session followed and then a collection which raised £260.

The BNP meetings in Stockport are getting bigger and better each time and anyone interested in attending should ring Duncan Warner on 07930 673 169.

Simon Darby in Shrewsbury

SHREWSBURY BNP held their first official meeting which attracted a broad cross section of the local community including teachers and war veterans.

Group organiser Karl Foulkes, started proceedings by talking about the series of 'wake up calls' that led to him joining the Party a few years ago.

Next to speak was James Whittall, who until recently was a member of the Conservative Party. Having spent the bulk of his adult life living in colonized areas of South East England, Shropshire-born James spoke passionately about his desire to save one of Britain's finest counties from becoming a victim of multi-culturalism.

Finally BNP deputy leader Simon Darby, enthralled the audience, giving an anecdotal behind the scenes account of the trial of Nick Griffin and Mark Collett - this century's most prominent legal victory for British free speech. Simon detailed the events right up until those unbearable few seconds before the jury read out the verdict that every freedom loving patriot had been praying for... NOT GUILTY!

Standing room only to hear Mark Collett in Bridlington

THERE was standing room only at the latest meeting of Bridlington BNP to hear Mark Collett give his first speech since his famous NOT GUILTY verdict at the Leeds Free Speech trial. Mark told the audience: "This year has been a very successful one for the Party. There was a record number of councillors elected in May, over one million new BNP leaflets have been sold in four months, and in recent weeks the BNP website has been receiving 26,000 hits a day." He said that it was no wonder Labour leader-in-waiting Gordon Brown, wanted to tighten the laws to silence the BNP because in Labour's traditional heartlands, we were winning over Labour voters in their droves. The meeting also heard from former Metropolitan police officer and Scarborough fundholder Vince Rosser, and Harrogate organiser Tom Linden.

Allerdale meeting

IAN Dawson was the guest speaker at the last meeting of the year for the Allerdale Group of the BNP. It was the British National Party's Group Support officer's first visit to West Cumbria and he was warmly welcomed by an enthusiastic audience at a working mens' club in Workington. Local organiser Paul Stafford, chaired the meeting which also heard from Clive Jefferson from Cockermouth, who recounted the events of his two weeks as part of the security team looking after Nick Griffin and Mark Collett and their families at the Free Speech trial in Leeds. Another speaker was David Fraser from Carlisle, who spoke passionately about the loss of jobs in Cumbria, many of which have been offshored to cheap labour countries in Asia and Eastern Europe.

Standing in the corridors to hear Nick Griffin speak

BITISH National Party chairman Nick Griffin, ably demonstrated in front of a packed audience in a North Hampshire village why the media are desperate to silence him. At his first meeting since the resounding success at the Leeds trial, Nick gave a virtuoso speech to an audience that was so large that members were forced to stand outside in the corridor to listen! Nick then took questions from the floor on any and every subject and was able to answer them in a concise and accurate manner, for, as he pointed out: "We are not a one trick outfit, but a political party with a comprehensive and carefully thought out manifesto which, if enacted, will assure this country a prosperous, law abiding, self sufficient population secure in its own Nationhood." As a prelude to the main event the Regional Organiser Roger Robertson, gave a very upbeat resume of the progress being made in the region in both the number of new members and the organisational structure. He outlined the success we had obtained in Windsor with 34 activists leafleting an area of discontent - which resulted in close to 100 responses with many joining instantly as well as the resulting publicity which culminated in a banner headline in the local paper.

Eastern European influx becomes an election issue in Harrogate

NEIL Smith, a prospective BNP local council election candidate in May, was a guest speaker at a meeting of the British National Party in Harrogate. He spoke on the difficulties being faced by local taxi drivers who were being undercut by the influx of Eastern European drivers. Neil said that taxi drivers felt abandoned and many, despite a life time of faithful service, were now being forced to look elsewhere for work. Also speaking at the meeting was local accountant Mark Dobson, who spoke about the changes in the hotel industry and how workers from Eastern Europe were now providing the bulk of new recruits to the industry. After the two speeches the meeting decided to make this Eastern European invasion a campaign issue at the local elections in May. Local organiser Tom Linden, then introduced Colin Banner, who has stood for the BNP in six elections in Harrogate. He outlined why he had stood for the first time, how easy it was to campaign and about the support that was given to candidates. Buoyed by Colin's address, eight members came forward and offered to stand as British National Party candidates in Harrogate.

HARROGATE: 8 potential local council election candidates came forward.

Last BNP meeting for Coventry & Warwick

COVENTRY and Warwickshire British National Party has held its final meeting as a Branch. After discussions with local activists, BNP Group Development officer Sadie Graham, came to the meeting to explain the changes. Under the new structure the Party now has contacts in Stratford upon Avon, Rugby, North Warwickshire, Bedworth, and Warwick district, which covers Kenilworth, Warwick and Leamington Spa. The remainder of the area will come under the Coventry & Nuneaton Branch and even this will hopefully be broken down into smaller units in the future. Organiser Chris Turner, said he was happy that the new contacts would get a chance to build up their own areas. "It's long overdue and will hopefully ease my workload. I have been covering nine parliamentary seats, liaising with six different councils containing 130 council wards, home to a million voters." It was a well attended meeting which raised a collection of £643.00.

Crime & Antisocial Behaviour Are Out Of Control

Robberies are up, muggings and sexual assaults are up, burglary is up. A wave of anti-social behaviour is sweeping our streets and estates with a minority of rowdy youths making life unpleasant for the law abiding majority. But where are all the police? Set behind desks learning how to be politically correct!

When the police aren't sat in offices they're far too busy chasing drivers to collect a range of different fines and penalties to help fund the out of touch council. It seems that New Labour view the motorist as the only real threat to public safety!

But while the police aren't sat in offices they're far too busy chasing drivers to collect a range of different fines and penalties to help fund the out of touch council. It seems that New Labour view the motorist as the only real threat to public safety!

The British National Party would put police back on the streets where they belong. Police would not be having their hands tied by politically correct hand cuffs and would be able to deal with criminals without fear of losing their jobs.

But Where Are All The Police?

The Cost of Europe

"Britain's membership of the EU costs the taxpayer £8.5 billion every year"

But the costs of membership are not just monetary...

- Jobs Thanks to the European Union, Britain's businesses are weighed down with bureaucracy and red tape, destroying thousands of jobs.
- Sovereignty The EU is taking power away from Westminster and placing it in the hands of unelected bureaucrats.
- Currency Every member nation will be forced to join the Euro, that means no more pounds, and no more control over our economy.
- Fair Trials The British legal system rests on the rule of innocent until proven guilty, in Europe it's the other way round.

The NHS In Crisis

A £512 Million Deficit

Health Secretary Patricia Hewitt was forced to admit that the NHS deficit has reached £512 million - more than double the £200 million target.

15,000 NHS Jobs Face The Axe

In a desperate bid to cut costs in the face of the huge £512 million deficit, over 15,000 NHS jobs are to be axed. This means more understaffed hospitals.

1,000 NHS Beds To Go

More Labour cuts are on the way to reduce costs. A further 1,000 beds are to go this year alone.

FACT: There are more managers in the NHS than there are beds for patients.

FACT: The British National Party is the only party willing to cut costs by cutting bureaucracy and put patients first.

COVENTRY

ON REMEMBRANCE SUNDAY, British National Party councillors, officials and members laid wreaths in memory of those who gave their lives for our country. Tributes from the BNP to the fallen were made in towns and cities up and down the country, many as part of the official British Legion Service and others at private wreath-layings. What a contrast to the Labour Party, many of whose councillors boycotted the ceremonies 'in case it caused offence to sections of the community'.

BIRMINGHAM: Twenty activists joined more than a thousand onlookers at the Hall of Remembrance in Birmingham City Centre. A wreath was laid on behalf of the Party by the city's local organisers - Mike Bell (South Birmingham), Denis Adams (East Birmingham) and Gerard McLaughlin (North Birmingham).

BURNLEY: A wreath was laid on behalf of the BNP councillors by Len Starr. COALVILLE: Once again Leicestershire members gathered to remember the fallen. This year for the service in Coalville which was much more traditional and appropriate than the service in Hinckley last year which served up a PC version of Remembrance much to the disgust of all present.

Ex-Serviceman and branch secretary Mike Robinson, laid the wreath which had the simple message: "We shall remember what they had to pay to keep our land and people free." - Leicestershire BNP.

CROYDON: BNP members and supporters joined the official ceremony in Addington to lay a wreath at the war memorial dedicated to those who lost their lives in the Great War of 1914-18.

DEWSBURY: Councillor Colin Auty and local organiser Nick Cass, together with their families attended the memorial service in Dewsbury town centre. After the service, local people and leaders of many local organisations came up and shook Colin's hand, much to the discomfort of Labour MP Shahid Malik.

EPPING: Pat Richardson, the leader of the BNP Group on Epping Forest Council, laid a wreath of poppies on Loughton War Memorial during the official wreath laying ceremony, attended by, amongst others, the Royal British Legion, Air Cadets and Salvation Army. The moving event was also attended by Councillors Sue Clapp and Tom Richardson, and by a large number of local BNP members.

LICHFIELD: A wreath was laid on behalf of local members by Bill Locke. MIRFIELD: Local stalwart Andrew Cookson placed a wreath at the war memorial in a town where the BNP has consistently come 2nd in local elections.

MORAY & GORDON: Group organiser and election candidate Gary Raikes became the first BNP official to lay a wreath at a ceremony in the North East of Scotland. The BNP was the only political party present, something which was noticed by the good people of the community and the local newspaper.

PENDLE: Councillor Brian Parker, laid wreaths in Nelson and Colne.

SCARBOROUGH: Scarborough and Ryedale BNP paid their tribute to those who died serving our country. It was the first time the group has attended the local Remembrance ceremony, and Trisha Scott laid a wreath on its behalf.

STOCKPORT: For the fifth successive year, Stockport branch attended the town's Remembrance Day service. The wreath this year was in the shape of a cross to emphasise the Christian nature of the occasion and this drew many favourable comments from those viewing the wreaths after the service.

STOKE: The city's BNP councillors took part in the official civic ceremony to remember the fallen at the Cenotaph situated in Kingsway outside Stoke Town Hall. Twenty five official wreaths from the differing organisations were laid to the background of a spoken version of Remembering, taken from "The Fallen" by Laurence Binyon. Stoke BNP's longest serving councillor Steve Batkin, laid the BNP wreath.

WORCESTER: Members of the Worcestershire Group attended the Annual Remembrance Day parade and ceremony at Worcester Cathedral. Representatives from the armed forces, local government, St John's Ambulance, the police, fire and ambulance service, The Salvation Army and the Royal British Legion laid their wreaths. Alongside the dignitaries, Worcestershire Organiser Martin Roberts, laid a wreath on behalf of the British National Party and following the ceremony, together with councillor David Enderby, they marched with the parade through the city to take the Lord Mayor's salute outside the Guildhall. The ceremony was more poignant than ever, given that the Worcester and Sherwood Foresters Regiment who were present, were to leave the parade, and head straight to Iraq.

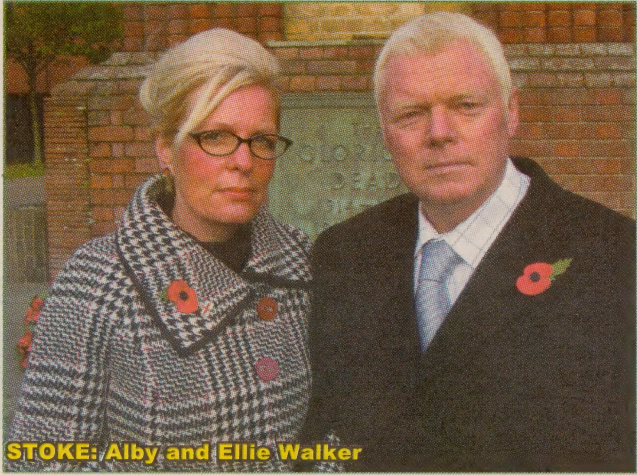

YORK: Organiser Geoff Carr and National Group Support Officer Ian Dawson, represented York BNP and laid a wreath at the official ceremony.
